SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Lamar Alexander (1940- ) is the first Tennessee governor to serve two consecutive four year terms. The Governor Lamar Alexander Papers, 1979-1987, represent an official record of those years. Totaling over 426 cubic feet of 1017 manuscript boxes, the Alexander Papers have been arranged under boards and commissions, clippings, correspondence, extraditions and renditions, financial records, governor's private files, Granville Hinton files, McKeel Hunt files, Lewis Lavine files, legal counsel, legislation, ombudsman, photographs, policy group, printed materials, proclamations, reports, scheduling, speeches, and subject files.

Early in the first Alexander administration the news media identified a small group of advisors ("the brain trust") which provided coordination to Alexander's legislative proposals. Identified on the "Organization Chart" as the Policy Group, these young men and women gave Governor Alexander advice on how to run the state. The Policy Group was particularly active and influential in the first half of the first administration.

Boards and commissions files provide information on 165 state boards and commissions. The files may include correspondence dating back to the Governor Ray Blanton administration (1975-1979).

Clippings are arranged by date and subject according to Nashville papers and the statewide papers from the ninety-five counties.

Correspondence comprises over one third of the collection. The volume of mail increased so rapidly that by January 1982 a correspondence center was established in order to expedite the processing of mail (see "Organization Chart"). By April of 1985 the center was receiving an average of 23,000 letters annually. The general correspondence covers a wide range of subjects that reflect the concerns of Tennesseans of this time period; the arguments for and against the completion of the Columbia Dam project; increasing teacher salaries; the death penalty for Ronald Harries; requests for a Tenne-Senior discount ticket; unemployment; legalization of gambling; the Better Schools bill; litter; pornography; seat belt proposal; and many other serious and not so serious concerns. Although the general correspondence has not been indexed, there is an "Index of Names and Subjects" found outside of this series.

The press influence in the Alexander administration is seen as several of Lamar Alexander's closest advisors came from newspaper backgrounds. In addition, the press influence is demonstrated, in part, by the volume of press releases issued by the Information Office.

In February 1979 Governor Alexander created the office of Ombudsman ("red tape cutter"). The idea apparently originated from his 1022 mile walk across the state during the 1978 campaign. During the walk he heard from the citizenry a common complaint that there should be an easier way of communicating problems and having them responded to. The Ombudsman office in Nashville was soon expanded to include six regional offices. A wide variety of personal services were rendered to Tennesseans by these "red tape cutters" which contributed to the general belief of the accessibility of the Alexander administration. The Ombudsman files comprise over sixty boxes in the collection.

The Scheduling office played an important role in arranging public appearances for the Governor. The office of the governor received numerous requests from organizations as well as individuals asking that the Governor appear and often to speak at the dedication or opening of a new facility, to ride in a parade, or to participate in some public event. Most invitations were of necessity declined because of scheduling conflicts but a few were carefully accepted. Correspondence relating to these invitations are arranged in the scheduling files.

Several statewide programs were initiated by the Alexander administration. In his book Steps Along the Way, Lamar Alexander lists, among others, the following projects that his tenure helped happen: 1.) Master Teachers and Principals ("Career Ladder"); 2.) Homecoming '86; 3.) Saturn and Nissan; 4.) Knoxville's Oak Ridge Corridor ("Technology Corridor"); 5.) Clean Water Program ("Safe Growth"); 6.) Better Schools Task Force; 7.) Basic Skills First; 8.) Memphis Jobs Conference; and 9.) Tenne-Senior. Reference to the key programs may all be found listed under "Index of Names and Subjects" in the finding aid.
